Course Description
How do contemporary anthropological approaches to sex, sexuality, and gender help us understand the lives of Indian hijras, Brazilian travestis, early twentieth-century American "fairies," Native American "Berdache," 1960s drag queens, contemporary sex workers in the U.S. and the Philippines, or the place of kinship in the contemporary United States?

Engaging these and other topics, this course will explore anthropological approaches to sex, gender, and sexuality, and the complex relations between sexual and gendered practices, identities, and roles. With a particular focus on ethnographic methodologies and research issues, we will consider how studies of gender and sexuality have intersected with traditional anthropological concerns about personhood, kinship, gender roles, and community, and the ways that contemporary anthropological theories of sexuality and gender are both useful and problematic in describing Western and non-Western societies. We will look at the growing body of LGBT/queer anthropology, examine its roots in feminist anthropology, and place the new anthropological literature on transgender issues in the context of this history. Further, we will consider how shifts in feminist and queer scholarship and politics have also required anthropologists of sexuality and gender to incorporate an understanding of race, ethnicity, class, and globalization in their analyses. In particular, the course aims to highlight the impact of poststructuralist arguments about the performative nature of gender and sexual identity and Foucauldian approaches to power and identity formation on anthropological theories. In turn, we will consider what ethnography can contribute to theoretical models developed by scholars working outside the traditions of anthropology.

A focus on ethnographic studies will be complemented by readings in other bodies of literature that have informed anthropological studies of sexuality and gender in the past thirty years, including history, queer theory, and sociology.

Course Requirements
The primary requirements for this class will be three papers, two short papers (4-5 pages for undergraduates, 6-7 pages for graduate students) and a final paper (5-7 pages for undergraduates, 8-10 pages for graduate students). Paper topics will be assigned well in advance, and are due on the dates listed in the syllabus below. Graduate students may opt to conduct a longer research paper in lieu of the class papers. To take this option, students should consult with me early in the semester, and regular updates on your work toward completion are expected through the semester, with written progress reports on the days other student papers are due. You are encouraged to send me drafts of your papers via email at least 4 days before the due date. Final versions of papers will not be accepted via email, however.
Naturally, your papers should be carefully written and edited, and papers which do not meet an acceptable standard will be returned to you for revision.

Your grade will be assessed according to a formula which takes into account not only your written work, but also your participation in classroom discussion and your preparedness. As such, it is expected that you will have completed the reading assignments listed prior to attending class so that you can fully participate in discussions. Students are strongly encouraged read the "recommended" readings but they are not required. In addition, bi-weekly postings to the class WebCT board are required and each student will make one formal in class presentation. I encourage all of you to take advantage of my office hours to come and discuss the class readings or your papers. If you cannot make the listed office hours, contact me to make an appointment.

The specific grade formula is as follows:
Paper 1 and 2: 50%
Paper 3: 30% presentation 10% participation 10%

Finally, attendance at all classes is essential. If you have a medical or other emergency that prevents you from attending class, you should inform me prior to the class, or as soon after as is possible. Please note the attendance policy: every two unexcused absences will result in a reduction of your grade by one grade point (e.g. from A- to B+).

What it Means to Read

In setting the readings on this syllabus, I am laying out both a historical and thematic approach to the concepts of "sex," "gender," and "sexuality" in anthropology and the social sciences more generally. In reading your class assignments, I expect that you read the articles and books critically, that is, with an eye to the assumptions, claims, and conclusions of the authors. In other words, I expect you to derive from your reading not simply a knowledge of the content of the materials, but also the ways in which these authors understand and work with these broader concepts ("sex," "gender," and "sexuality."). As the semester progresses, you will be encouraged to draw earlier readings into your written work and class discussions. As such, my strong suggestion is that you take notes on the materials you read to aid you in this task.
